

THE KINGDOM OF K'NAAN

Complete Location Guide for Map Construction

This document catalogues every named location mentioned in The Sacred Veil campaign, organised from largest scale to smallest. Each entry describes what the place is, where it sits relative to other landmarks, and what it contains. Unnamed but geographically significant features are listed at the end.

1. How to Read This Guide

Position tells you where to place something on a map. Cardinal directions (NW, NE, centre, etc.) refer to position within the kingdom of K'naan. "Against the Eastern Massif" means right up against the mountain wall on the east edge. "Inland from Gath-Mere" means further from the Silt-Mere coast, toward the interior.

Contains lists sub-locations nested inside a parent. These don't need separate map pins — they're inside the parent location. Buildings within city districts are at the smallest scale and only matter for city-level inset maps.

Scale guide: K'naan is a small, isolated kingdom. Bet-Seraphim is described as "three days' ride" from Ash-Kadesh, and the Great Forge's chimney is visible from "three days' ride away." This gives you a rough sense of distances.

2. World and Kingdom

Averium — World

Position: The broader world that contains everything. K'naan is one small kingdom within it.

Description: A vast world. The campaign takes place entirely within K'naan, so Averium itself doesn't need mapping — just know that K'naan is a tiny, isolated corner of something much larger.

K'naan — Kingdom

Position: An isolated realm hemmed in by geography on all sides: the Silt-Mere sea to the NW, the Eastern Massif mountains along the entire east edge, forests to the W and SW, and moors filling the space between.

Description: A small, grim, neo-feudal kingdom. Geography cuts it into regions that evolved in near-isolation. The terrain is described as 'jagged and obstructive.' Central plains surround the capital, Ash-Kadesh. This is the entire playable map area.

3. The Four Regions

K'naan is divided into four major geographic regions. Think of these as biomes or terrain zones that define the character of different parts of the kingdom.

The Silt-Mere — Region — massive inland sea

Position: NW corner of the kingdom. Dominates K'naan's northwestern horizon. Silt-flats curl around its SW shore and trail southward.

Description: A vast brackish, shallow inland sea with unpredictable tides. Mud-flats that can swallow a horse. Largely unmapped beyond the immediate coast. 'Islands' are shifting mounds of silt and bone, not stable land. House Kaelen controls the shoreline; House Grendel occupies its marshy southern fringes.

The White-Blind mist originates here and rolls inland across the Gorse-Barrens.

The Eastern Massif — Region — mountain range

Position: Forms the entire eastern boundary of K'naan, running top-to-bottom along the east edge of the map. A wall of grey stone.

Description: Peaks so steep and shattered that only a handful of high passes are remotely traversable. The single reliable pass is guarded by Raven-Garron (House Morbray). Amarsgate sits at its foot in the NE. This is the kingdom's hard eastern border — nothing gets through easily.

The Gorse-Barrens — Region — moors and mire-land

Position: The broad belt of land stretching between the Silt-Mere (NW) and the Eastern Massif (E). Fills the interior lowlands.

Description: Noisome bogs, mire-choked earth, sparse settlements. Frequently blanketed by the White-Blind mist. This is the rough, inhospitable middle ground of the kingdom — not sea, not mountain, just wet, miserable moorland.

The Great Plains — Region — open plains

Position: Between the Gorse-Barrens and the Eastern Massif. Mentioned once as a distinct area alongside the Gorse-Barrens.

Description: Windswept and lawless open land east of the Gorse-Barrens. Less boggy than the Barrens but equally inhospitable. Travelers cross it to reach the Eastern Massif passes.

Only mentioned once in the lore. May overlap with or border the Gorse-Barrens.

The Great Forests — Region — forests

Position: Two large forest masses: one centre-west of the kingdom, one larger mass in the SW corner.

Description: Haven of the most wicked and foulest creatures, including Witches. The land offers no true sanctuary. Imposing and rightfully feared. A road from Ash-Kadesh runs south through the forests to reach Grendel's Reach.

These are two separate forest bodies on the map, not one continuous mass.

4. Major Settlements

Seven major settlements, each tied to a noble house. These are the main pins on any kingdom-scale map.

Ash-Kadesh — Capital city

Position: Centre of the kingdom. Built on a long ridge above the confluence of three trade roads. Roads radiate outward to every other major settlement.

Description: The capital of K'naan. Three districts stacked vertically on the ridge: Crown-Shelf (high/noble) at the top, Ledger-Ward (middle/administrative) in the centre, The Mourn (low/criminal) at the bottom. The Dusk-Knell bell rings at twilight to close Crown-Shelf to commoners.

Contains: Crown-Shelf, Ledger-Ward, The Mourn (see Section 6 for detail)

Gath-Mere — Port city (House Kaelen)

Position: Top-left (NW) of the kingdom. Coastal, on the inland edge of the Silt-Mere. Road connects south to Ash-Kadesh via a junction.

Description: Port on the Silt-Mere shore. Grain silos and fish-drying racks dominate the skyline. The Silt-Strider Collective operates from Tide-Reach Wharf along roughly a mile of shoreline.

Contains: Tide-Reach Wharf, Silveldt (inland manor, see Buildings section)

Har-Moloch — Forge city (House Vane) — "Mount of the Devourer"

Position: NE of the kingdom, west of the Eastern Massif foothills. Road connects SW to Ash-Kadesh and NE to Amarsgate.

Description: Tens of thousands living under permanent grey haze. Skyline of smelting towers and slag-heaps called the Iron Teeth. The Great Forge's chimney stack is visible from three days' ride away on a clear day.

Contains: Anvilhold (Vane's keep), Third Furnace, The Great Forge

Bet-Seraphim — Abbey-refinery (House Chancel)

Position: Directly east of Ash-Kadesh, relatively close. Three days' ride from the capital. Road continues east (dashed/unmaintained) toward Raven-Garron.

Description: Part cathedral, part chemical works. The reek of refinement carries for miles. The Drift — a surrounding town of pilgrims and indentured refiners — has grown around it.

Contains: The Drift (surrounding town)

Raven-Garron — Fortress town (House Morbray)

Position: Far east, sitting against the Eastern Massif. Connected by an unmaintained route from Bet-Seraphim.

Description: Black-walled keep guarding the most reliably traversable pass through the Eastern Massif. The town below exists to service the cavalry. A dead rowan tree stands in the courtyard, said to have grown from the grave of the first Morbray to hold the pass.

Contains: Dead Rowan Tree (courtyard landmark)

Amarsgate — Mining town (House Jannin) — the party's home

Position: NE, right against the Eastern Massif at its foot. Road connects SW through Har-Moloch to Ash-Kadesh.

Description: Small fortified town built around a silver mine. Keep Amar stands on the ridge above the mine. When the campaign begins, the town is burning — this is where the story starts.

Contains: Keep Amar (on the ridge above), the silver mine (unnamed)

Grendel's Reach — Stilt-village (House Grendel)

Position: South of centre, in the southern silt-flats where the Silt-Mere's marshy fringes extend south. Road from Ash-Kadesh runs south through the forests to reach it.

Description: Houses raised a full storey above the water on stilts, connected by rope bridges. The Rot — Grendel's keep — is a squat, algae-slicked dark-stone tower whose lower floors are periodically underwater.

Contains: The Rot (Grendel's keep)

5. Road Network

Six named routes connect the settlements. Solid lines are maintained roads; dashed lines are unmaintained or dangerous routes.

Route	Type	Notes
Gath-Mere to Ash-Kadesh	Solid (main road)	Via a junction point. NW to centre.
Ash-Kadesh to Bet-Seraphim	Solid (main road)	Centre to east. Relatively short.
Bet-Seraphim to Raven-Garron	Dashed (unmaintained)	East to far-east. Crosses rough terrain toward the Massif.
Ash-Kadesh to Har-Moloch	Solid (main road)	Centre to NE.
Har-Moloch to Amarsgate	Solid (main road)	NE branch continuing to the Massif foot.
Ash-Kadesh to Grendel's Reach	Solid (main road)	Centre to south, passing through the Great Forests.

There is also an unmaintained dotted route near Ash-Kadesh's outskirts. None of the individual trade roads have proper names.

6. Districts of Ash-Kadesh

Ash-Kadesh is built on a long ridge. Three districts are stacked vertically — think of it as a tiered city, highest to lowest:

Crown-Shelf — High district (top of ridge)

Position: The uppermost tier of Ash-Kadesh's ridge.

Description: Noble residences. Closed to commoners at twilight when the Dusk-Knell bell rings — you need a signed writ to enter after dark.

Contains: The Iron Gavel (courthouse-barracks, House Valerius)

Ledger-Ward — Middle district

Position: The middle tier of Ash-Kadesh's ridge, between Crown-Shelf above and The Mourn below.

Description: Administrative and religious centre. Magistracy, counting-houses, and the kingdom's major institutions.

Contains: The Hollow Sun, Thorne Archive, Argent Academy, The Golden Weights

The Mourn — Low district (bottom of ridge)

Position: The lowest tier of Ash-Kadesh's ridge.

Description: The criminal element operates openly here. The magistracy's writ runs thin.

Contains: The Spike (Iron Spire syndicate's stronghold)

7. Named Buildings and Holdings

These are specific named structures inside the settlements above. On a kingdom-scale map, they don't need individual pins — they matter for city-level inset maps or detailed views.

Within Ash-Kadesh:

The Hollow Sun — Cathedral / temple

Position: Ledger-Ward, Ash-Kadesh.

Description: The Orthodoxy's great temple. Dome-roofed cathedral with deep vaults of crypts and confession-cells beneath the nave.

Thorne Archive — Seat of House Thorne

Position: Ledger-Ward, Ash-Kadesh.

Description: Narrow, tall, dark-stone building — three rooms wide, six storeys high. Vaults beneath hold original deeds and the kingdom's legal records.

The Iron Gavel — Courthouse-barracks (House Valerius)

Position: Crown-Shelf, Ash-Kadesh.

Description: Where justice is dispensed. Contains the Scaffold-Stone in its courtyard — a low granite block used for sentencing and execution for nine consecutive generations.

Argent Academy — Ordo Magicka's seat

Position: Ledger-Ward, Ash-Kadesh.

Description: Low, square building. No windows on the ground floor; exactly thirteen windows on each floor above. Small courtyard with a dry fountain.

The Golden Weights — Counting-house (Covenant of Coin)

Position: Ledger-Ward, Ash-Kadesh.

Description: Unremarkable facade. Vaults extend further underground than the building rises above.

The Spike — Criminal stronghold (Iron Spire syndicate)

Position: The Mourn, Ash-Kadesh.

Description: Tenement-warren. The magistracy does not enter.

Within Har-Moloch:

Anvilhold — Keep / fortress (House Vane)

Position: Inside Har-Moloch.

Description: Walls of black slag-glass, cast-iron throne, no natural light in the throne-room. Where Silas Vane presides.

Third Furnace — Industrial facility

Position: Inside Har-Moloch.

Description: Most feared post in the city. Foreman: Gest Harrow.

The Great Forge — Chainmakers' works

Position: Inside Har-Moloch.

Description: Largest single building in the city. Chimney stack visible from three days' ride away on a clear day. Three working levels. Where True Quality Steel is made.

Within or near other settlements:

The Drift — Town surrounding Bet-Seraphim

Position: Immediately around Bet-Seraphim.

Description: Community of pilgrims, indentured refiners, and the alms-poor. Not a walled settlement — it's the sprawl around the abbey.

Tide-Reach Wharf — Wharf / port facility

Position: Along the Silt-Mere shore at Gath-Mere. Stretches roughly one mile.

Description: The Silt-Strider Collective's headquarters. Where shore-trade happens.

Silveldt — Manor estate (Olenna Kaelen)

Position: Inland from Gath-Mere, central-north. A separate holding from Gath-Mere proper.

Description: Pale-stone hall raised above the flood-plain; the ground floor floods some years. A Kaelen holding but geographically distinct from the port city.

The Rot — Keep / tower (House Grendel)

Position: Inside Grendel's Reach.

Description: Squat, algae-slicked dark-stone tower. Lower floors are periodically underwater.

Keep Amar — Fortified keep (House Jannin)

Position: On the ridge above the silver mine at Amarsgate, at the foot of the Eastern Massif.

Description: By tradition, whoever holds the keep takes its name. Destroyed in the campaign-opening siege.

8. Landmarks

Dead Rowan Tree — Ancient tree

Position: In the courtyard of Raven-Garron.

Description: Single ancient dead tree, never cut down. Said to have grown from the grave of the first Morbray to hold the pass.

Scaffold-Stone — Execution block

Position: In the courtyard of The Iron Gavel, Crown-Shelf, Ash-Kadesh.

Description: Low granite block. Used for sentencing and execution for nine consecutive generations.

Iron Teeth — Skyline feature

Position: The skyline of Har-Moloch, visible from a distance.

Description: The smelting towers and slag-heaps that define Har-Moloch's silhouette.

Dusk-Knell — Bell

Position: Ash-Kadesh (exact mounting point unspecified).

Description: A single bell cast from Vane steel, rung at twilight. Its tolling closes Crown-Shelf to commoners.

9. Mystery Sites

The Drowned Moot — Ritual site (Silt-Eaters cult)

Position: Somewhere deep in the Silt-Mere. Exact location deliberately unknown.

Description: Recovered bodies come from sites marked by spirals of broken pottery and human bone with standing water at the centre. On the atlas, this gets deliberate-mystery treatment — no fixed pin, just a '[LOCATION UNKNOWN]' annotation.

For map purposes: place a vague marker somewhere in the Silt-Mere interior, not at a specific point.

10. Geographic Phenomena

The White-Blind — Weather phenomenon

Position: Originates from the Silt-Mere, rolls inland to blanket the Gorse-Barrens.

Description: A thick, salty mist that can last minutes, hours, or days. Carries heavy brine that rusts iron, rots leather, and chokes the lungs. Not a location, but defines the character of a large area — the entire Gorse-Barrens region lives under its threat.

For map purposes: an atmospheric effect zone covering the Gorse-Barrens, sourced from the Silt-Mere.

11. Unnamed Features Worth Placing

These geographic features are mentioned repeatedly but never given proper names. They're significant enough to appear on a map and may need names assigned.

Feature	Type	Notes
The pass at Raven-Garron	Mountain pass	Through the Eastern Massif at Raven-Garron. The only reliably traversable pass. Guarded by House Morbray.
The silver mine at Amarsgate	Mine	At Amarsgate, at the foot of the Eastern Massif. Below Keep Amar. House Jannin's source of wealth.
Three trade roads at Ash-Kadesh	Road confluence	The capital sits above where three roads meet. None have individual names.
The Frontier	Conceptual boundary	Not a line on a map — the point where the roads simply end, swallowed by the Barrens or the Mere.
Silt-flats	Terrain feature	Orange/marshy flats curling around the SW shore of the Silt-Mere and trailing south toward Grendel's Reach.

Total named locations: 37 (36 original + Great Plains). Plus 5 unnamed features. Source: every content file in The Sacred Veil repository.
